MILK FLOWS FREELY

McLaughlin's Dairy Team Runs Away

On Brown Street

The latest fad was distributed, apparently along Brown Street, last Saturday forenoon, when a spirited team of horses attached to Mr. Lauchlin's dairy wagon, became frightened at a passing wood sawing machine while standing near the postoffice. Up the street dashed the team with the milk cart bounding behind them like a rubber ball. After turning the corner at Brown and River Streets the animals ran onto the side veranda at the City Hotel, and were brought to an abrupt stop. The wagon was slightly damaged. All the milk had been spilled, but Mr. McLaughlin found that several gallons of cream had been churned into butter and this in a measure reimbursed him for his loss.

Fred Perrault, who was called home by the death of his sister, Mrs. Michael Dunn, returned Friday to Grassville.

PASSENGER MEN CHANCE HERE

See Limited Crews Now Stay Over in This City

The crews of Soo Limited trains 7 and 8 will soon stay over in this city. The change goes into effect next week and from then on Rhineland will be the headquarters for Soo passenger men. These men make their homes at Minnapolis and it is probable that they will continue their residence there. The present arrangement will necessitate the placing of another crew on the line.

There is a rumor in railroad circles that the Soo line will also make a change in the running of its passenger trains over this division. It is said that local trains 84 and 85 will go only to this city instead of to Peninsula as they have been doing for several years past.

It is further reported that trains 84 and 85 which now run between Sault Ste. Marie and Escanaba will come as far as Rhineland.

Along with other rumors regarding the Soo line it is whispered that the company will commence work on the erection of its new passenger depot here this spring. The people of Rhineland hope this will prove a fact, but then "what's the use of dreaming?"

FIFTY NEW MEMBERS JOIN WOODMEN CAMP

Second Largest Class in History of Local Lodge Is Adopted Saturday Evening

Last Saturday evening marked an important epoch in the history of Lake Camp 1749, Modern Woodmen of America, of this city. Fifty candidates, the second largest class to ever join the order in Rhineland, were adopted as members of the Camp.

Ceremony of Adoption
The adoption and initiation ceremony was held at Gilligan's hall, the regular Woodmen lodge rooms, on Brown Street being too small to accommodate the large gathering of members who assembled to witness the work. It is estimated that at least two hundred and fifty Woodmen, not including the candidates, were in the hall. Delegations from Hills, Grandon, Robbins, Three Lakes, Tomahawk and Merrill were present.

The initiation was in charge of the Forester drill team from Mulberry Camp at Merrill. This team is recognized as one of the leading organizations of its character in Wisconsin and has won prizes at all in conventions and picnics in all parts of the country. The exhibition given by the team Saturday evening was exceedingly clever and illustrated the fact that the members are thoroughly efficient in military training. Applause was frequent.

S. J. Williams, deputy organizer of the order, officiated at the adoption of candidates and the ceremony was perfectly conducted. The new ritual of the society was used for the first time in this city.

Following the work the members held a short social session during which lunch was served. The event will linger long in the memories of all in attendance as one of the most enjoyable affairs in Rhineland lodge circles.

Membership is 475

With the addition of the new members Lake Camp now has the largest membership of any Woodmen lodge in entire northern Wisconsin, outside of Wausau, the total number being four hundred and seventy-five. During the last year the local lodge paid three death claims, a very small percentage considering the size of the Camp. Clerk Koepke looks for the lodge to reach the five hundred mark before next fall.

FACES DEATH ON TRACK

Summit Lake Men Undergo a Brave Racing Experience

Antony Bell, a former living near Summit Lake, underwent a fearful experience a few nights ago, when, with his right foot caught between the rail and a plank of a railroad crossing, he stood facing the south bound No. 12 train that, approaching at a speed of fifty miles an hour. Try as he would Bell was unable to free himself from his terrible position and with the train rounding toward him, a horrible death seemed certain.

As the train was just about to hit him, Bell threw himself with great force to the outside of the track. He expected to at least lose his leg, but as if by a miracle, the pilot of the engine caught him in such a manner as to free his foot.

The rim of the wheels passing over his toes. He was picked up by the train crew and conveyed to the hospital where his injuries were found to be slight. Amputation of the toes will not be necessary.

ANSWER TWO ALARMS ON TUESDAY NIGHT

Fire Causes Loss At Ole Peterson's Home—Ames' Barn Partially Destroyed

Fire which broke out in the home of Ole Peterson on Eastern Avenue, Tuesday evening, did damage to the building and contents to the amount of nearly $1000.

Mr. Peterson and family were attending the performance at the Bijou theatre and upon returning to their home discovered the rooms filled with smoke. An alarm was promptly given and hose company number 1 was soon on the scene. After an hour's work the blaze was subdued, although not before the interior of the house and furniture had been practically ruined by smoke and water. The exact cause of the fire is not known, but it is thought to have originated from a defective chimney in the kitchen.

Mr. Peterson is cashier at the Soo depot in this city. His loss, it is understood, is covered by insurance. The house is owned by Matt Stapleton.

Fire On South Side

The department had scarcely returned from the Peterson fire, Tuesday evening, when a second alarm was sounded. This time the blaze was found to be in the barn of Geo. Ames on Arbutus Street, south side. The roof of the structure was afire and by the reflection in the sky many people in other parts of the city were of the opinion that the whole south side was in danger of destruction. A team of horses and a cow were removed from the building before the flames had made much headway. The barn was partially ruined as was also several hundred dollars worth of harnesses and toys stored there.

MISS BOSSY GOES CALLING

Stray Cow Takes Possession of North Side Home
Nearly everyone has heard the ancient legend of the famous woman who went to the fair to see the fairy books by jumping over the moon, and also of the evil tempered boogies that lived over a lantern and caused the big Chicago fire. But did any one ever hear of a cow stealing into a dwelling house? Such an incident occurred, on the north side, the other day, when a stray Jersey, evidently tired of standing in a box stall all winter, started out on pleasure bent and completed her frolic by wandering into the home of Alex. Ross.

Mrs. Ross was at a neighbor's at the time, and the cow, finding the rear door open, forced her way into the kitchen. From this room Miss Bossy hiked into the dining room and then into the parlor. She knocked over several chairs and other furniture, smashed a table, and with her horns tore the lace curtains from the windows. It was then that Mrs. Ross arrived on the scene. The lady's surprise upon finding her home invaded by the animal can only be imagined. Woman like her first impulse was to emit a shrill cry for help. The cow at once became alarmed and in looking about for an opening through which to escape, spotted the large front window. Through the glass the frightened beast looked and was soon galloping up the street, carrying part of the window sash and strips of ruined curtains on her back.

Despite the destruction wrought by the cow, Mrs. Ross and other members of the family could not resist seeing the humorous side of the incident, which caused much amusement among the residents of that part of the city.

IMPORTANT SCHOOL LAW.

St. P. A. L. 1076.
Madison, Wis., Mar. 3, '10.
Dear Sir:

In answer to yours of recent date, a law passed by the last legislature provides that where persons live more than two miles from the school in the home district, and at least a half a mile nearer the school in an adjoining district, the parents may send the children to the adjoining district tuition free, and the attendance would not be raised to 65 or more pupils during any one term. The law further provides that in such cases, the home district shall pay to the district where the children attend school, all state and county money received by the home district, on account of such children, provided said children, if of compulsory age, shall attend six months regularly, and all other persons four months. In case the attendance provision is not complied with the parents shall pay the tuition.

Yours truly,
C. P. CARY,
State Superintendent.

MAY RAISE THE RATES

What is taken as formal notice that the Chicago & Northwestern and other rail lines intend to raise their rates was given by R. C. Richards, claim agent of the company, in an address before the Citizens' association at Manitowish, in which he made a plea for consideration by the public when the roads fall in service, etc. He declared that the company had been forced to meet an advance of over 100 per cent in operating expenses in the last ten years in face of a lower schedule of rates. Mr. Richards advocated a law making trespassing on property of railway companies punishable by heavy fine or jail sentence, declaring that a large majority of persons killed and injured were trespassers. He declared that only one in 1,000 claims against rail lines for loss or destruction of freight reach the courts and only one in 100 personal injury claims are litigated, pleading that the railway companies want to play fair and ask only a square deal.

PIKE SPAWN ESCAPE

Superintendent of Fisheries James Nevin reports a disappointment in his campaign for pike spawn in Wolf river owing to the unusually early spring. Heretofore he has planned to secure in that stream some 100,000,000 to 200,000,000 pike eggs, but this season the fish had already gone up river when his men arrived to collect the work. The shortage, however, can be made up by the fact that the spawn may yet be partially overcome by him.

The dispatches give out that Samuel Clements (Mark Twain) is dying at his mansion in Connecticut. He has been in poor health for some time.

Senator Aldrich has just announced his intention to retire from the U. S. Senate. What a pity that to the corporations whose interests he has so faithfully championed.

Wm. Hearst has decided that he wishes to re-enter the democratic fold but the members of the party have not as yet received him with open arms. Lilly is looked upon as a dynamite bomb, safer at a distance.

SOMETHING RADICALLY WRONG

A warrant was issued Friday for the arrest of Lester Bradshaw, town of Belvidere, on the charge of assaulting Albertina Smith, a girl thirteen years of age.

Alfred Smith, the father of the girl, has been the party, since the community has started to look for him.

Last Monday night O'Malley, a local politician, caught at the Southport hotel, charged with a woman, was charged with making his escape. It is the duty of the police to apprehend this young culprit who is charged with making his escape.

SULLIVAN IS DROPPED

As will be seen by the list of the mayor's appointments, Mike Sullivan, who has served on the police force many years, was dropped last Tuesday from the list of the city's police. He has many friends who lament this step on the part of the mayor. Some that Dept. of Public Instruction.

BERG SETS GOOD EXAMPLE

To ascertain the opinion of the voters regarding the course which he should pursue with a member of the council, Chris. Berg, the new Socialist alderman from the second ward, called a mass meeting of the residents of his ward at White's hall Monday evening. This is a new departure from that usually followed by public officials. If other men who are elected to act as the people's servants would follow Mr. Berg's example, the will of the masses in all public affairs would be carried out more fully than under present conditions.

RIGHTS IN CONGRESS.

"In congress the rules must be formed to take from the speaker, and lodge in a committee on committees, named in caucus, the selection of permanent committees. The power of the rules committee must be curtailed and rendered responsive by resolution to the will of the majority. Above all, the power must be taken from the speaker of refusing to recognize on the floor a member who has not previously made his peace with and secured consent of the speaker. "Such a practice as that which the speaker now enforces, is un-American and belittling to the manhood of representatives of a once sovereign, but now disfranchised, constituency. Of what use to send a representative to Washington if he has not the power even to rise and demand the recognition on the floor. The power of the speaker to recognize whom he will must and will be destroyed. Until this one iniquity is abolished, all other changes in the rules will be without avail. The congressmen must arise in might and assert the right of recognition and the right at any time to appeal to the decision of the majority on any question.

TARIFF POOR VOTE GETTER

In a congressional election in and around Rochester, N. Y., Tuesday, the republican machine was dealt a mighty blow. In a district which has been solidly republican for ten years by about 19,000 majority, a democratic vote of over 6,000. The defeat was overwhelming. In the campaign the republican candidate called into action the old republican machine and praised the Payne

CHAPTER XII.

SAID cavalierly: "This is Mr. Ward, Professor Kerdec. He is Mrs. Harman's cousin and close friend. We were speaking of your reasons for bringing Mr. Harman to this place. Frankly, we were questioning your motives."

"My motives? I have wished to restore to two young people the paradise which they had lost."

Ward uttered an exclamation none the less violent because it was half suppressed.

"We should be glad of an explanation," he said, resting his arms on my table and leaning across it toward Kerdec.

"It is simple," began the professor. "I learned my poor boy's history well from those who could tell me, from his papers—yes, and from the bundles of old time letters which were given me. From all these I learned what a beautiful soul was that lady who loved him so much that she ran away from her home for his sake. He was already ready the slave of what was bad and foolish; he had gone too far from himself, was overlaid with the habit of evil, and she could not save him then. The spirit was dying in him, although it was there, and it was good."

Ward's acid laughter rang out in the room.

"The inconceivable selfishness, the devilish brutality of it!" Ward's face was scarlet. "You didn't care how you sacrificed her?"

"Sacrificed?" The professor suddenly released the huge volume of his voice. "Sacrificed?" he thundered. "If I could give him back to her as he is now it would be restoring to her all that she had loved in him, the real self of him! It would be the greatest gift in her life."

"Then, my dear Kerdec," I answered, "either you are really insane or I am! You knew that this poor, unfortunate devil of a Harman was tied to that hyenic prowler yonder who means to fatten on him and will never release him; you knew that. Then why did you bring him down here to fall in love with a woman he can never have?"

"My dear fellow," interposed George quickly, "you underrate Professor Kerdec's shrewdness. He knows that my cousin Louise never obtained a divorce from her husband."

"What?" I said, amazed.

"I say Mrs. Harman never obtained a divorce."

"I saw notices of it at the time," I gasped.

"No. What you saw was that she had made an application for divorce. Her family got her that far and then she revolted. The suit was dropped."

"It is true, indeed," said Kerdec.

"The poor boy was on the other side of the world, and he thought it was granted."

"Sacrificed!" he thundered.

I turned upon him sharply. "You knew it?"

"It is a year that I have known it. Do you not understand?" George interposed, "that what Professor Kerdec risked for his 'poor boy' in returning to France was a trial on the charge of bigamy?"

The professor recoiled from the definite brutality.

"I conceive it very likely to happen," said George, "unless you get him out of the country before the lady now installed here as his wife discovers the truth."

"But she must not!" Kerdec lifted both hands toward Ward appealingly. They trembled. "She cannot! There is nothing that could make her suspect it!"

"One particular thing would be my telling her," said Ward quietly.

"Never!" cried the professor. "You would not do that!"

"I will, unless you get him out of the country, and quickly."

"George!" I exclaimed, coming forward between them. "This won't do at all! You can't!"

"That's enough," he said, waving me back, and I saw that his hand was shaking, too, like Kerdec's. His face had grown very white. "I know what you think," he went on, addressing me, "but you're wrong. It isn't for myself. When I sailed for New York I thought there was a chance that she would carry out the action she began four years ago and rid herself of him definitely—that is, I thought until today there was some hope for me. If she's seen him again and he's been anything except literally unbearable it's all over with me. From the first I never had a chance against him. He was a hard rival, even when he'd become only a cruel memory."

His voice rose. "Heaven knows why it is. It isn't because of anything he's done or has—It's just because it's him. I suppose—but I know my chance is gone for good. That leaves me free to act for her. No one can accuse me of doing it for myself. And I swear she shan't go through that slough of despond again while I have breath in my body!"

"George, for pity's sake!" I shouted, throwing my arm about his shoulders, for his voice had risen to a pitch of excitement and fury that I feared must bring the whole place upon us. Some one was already knocking for admission.

I crossed the room and opened the door. Miss Elizabeth stood there, red faced and fustered, and behind her stood Mr. Cresson Ingle, who looked dubiously amused.

Miss Elizabeth cut short a rather embarrassed handshake which her betrothed and I exchanged.

"This morning I learned the true situation over here, and I'm afraid Louise has heard. At least she's not at Quesnay. I got into a panic for fear she had come here; but, thank heaven, she does not seem to— Good gracious! What's that?"

It was the discordant voice of Marianna la Mursiana. My door was still open. I turned to look and saw her, hot faced, tousle haired, insufficiently wrapped, striving to ascend the gallery stairs, but valiantly opposed by Mme. Brossard.

"But no, madame," insisted Mme. Brossard. "You cannot ascend. There is nothing on the upper floor except the apartment of Professor Kerdec."

"Name of a dog!" shrieked the other.

"It is my husband's apartment, I tell you. Il y a une femme avec lui!"

"It is Mme. Harman who is there," said Kerdec hoarsely in my ear. "I came away and left them together."

"Come," I said, and, letting the others think what they would, sprang across the veranda, the professor beside me, and ran toward the two women, who were beginning to struggle with more than their tongues. I leaped by them and up the steps, but Kerdec thrust himself between our hostess and her opponent, planting his great bulk on the lowest step. Glancing hurriedly over my shoulder, I saw the Spanish woman strike him furiously upon the breast with both hands, but I knew she would never pass him.

I entered the salon of the "grande suite" and closed the door quickly behind me.

Louise Harman was standing at the other end of the room. Her husband was kneeling beside her. He held one of her hands in both of his. Her other rested upon his head, and something in their attitudes made me know I had come in upon their leave taking. But from the face he lifted toward her all had joined her, was crossing the garden toward her own apartment. She glanced over her shoulder, sent forth a scream and, whirling about, ran violently for the steps, where she was again blocked by the indomitable Kerdec.

"Ah, you foolish woman, I know who you are!" she cried. "You want to get yourself into trouble! That man in the room up there has been my husband these two years and more."

"No, madame," said Louise Harman. "You are mistaken; he is my husband."

"But you divorced him," vociferated the other wildly. "You divorced him in America!"

"No; you are mistaken," the quiet voice replied. "The suit was withdrawn. He is still my husband."

I heard the professor's groan of despair, but it was drowned in the wild shriek of Marianna. "What? You tell me that? Ah, the miserable! If what you say is true he shall pay bitterly! He shall wish that he had died by fire! What? You think he can marry me, break my leg so that I cannot dance again, ruin my career and then go away with a pretty woman like you and be happy? Ah, there are prisons in France for people who marry twice like that! He shall pay for it in suffering!"—her voice rose to an incredible and unbearable shriek—"and you, you shall pay too! You can't come stealing honest women's husbands like that! You shall pay!"

TAKE THE MARRIAGE VOWS

Miss Pansy McElrone Weds Geo. W. Wetterhahn of Duluth.

Monday morning at St. Mary's church, Rev. Father Hyland performed the ceremony which united in marriage Miss Pansy B. McElrone of this city, and Geo. W. Wetterhahn of Duluth. The wedding was a quiet one, being attended only by relatives. Miss Anna McElrone and Joseph McElrone, sister and brother of the bride, were the attendants.

The bride is the second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McElrone of 638 Dorr Avenue, and has many friends in the city.

Mr. Wetterhahn was employed on the building of the new court house in this city last summer and during his stay here formed a large acquaintance. He is now employed as conductor on the street railway at Duluth.

The young couple left Monday afternoon for Duluth where they will make their home.

BETTER STAY IN BED

Some of the residents of Rhinelander have been arising from their slumbers at an early hour these mornings in order to catch a glimpse of Halley's comet. They might as well remain under the quilts as the celestial visitor is as yet invisible to the naked eye in this locality.

The New North was not in error last week when it stated that the comet is visible, as it is now being seen in many parts of the country, but according to all reports none of the star gazers in this city have thus far observed it.

TO WED NEXT SATURDAY

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Martha A. Davis and Anthony Revnew, both of Woodruff, which will take place at the M. W. A. hall at that village next Saturday evening. Mr. Revnew is head clerk at D. A. Kahn's large general store at Woodruff and has a wide acquaintance in this city.

The bride to be is one of the popular young ladies of her community.

UNCLE SAM'S CONSULS

BY EDWARD B. CLARK
DRAWINGS BY DEARBORN MELVILL

WASHINGTON.—It is the desire of Secretary of State Knox as it was that of Secretary Root, to put the consular service of the United States as nearly as it is possible so to do, upon the plane of the civil service. All consular appointments to-day are made largely upon the recommendation of senators and representatives and other men of political influence; but the appointees are given places of the lowest rank in the service and must depend upon the excellence of their work to secure promotion. Moreover they must pass a satisfactory examination before the department will assign them to posts of duty.

The administration, it is known, would be glad if it were possible to apply civil service rules to these appointments of ministers and ambassadors, but as the holders of these high diplomatic offices are forced to great expense of living, and their salaries are comparatively small, no man can become a first place representative of his country abroad unless he belongs to the class of the millionaires. The result of this is that in many cases money rather than ability fixes the appointments of some of our ministers and ambassadors.

In the past there were many literary men of standing but whose books did not bring them in a large revenue, who sought places in the consular service in order that they might have a regular income, comparatively little office work, and an opportunity also to get the atmosphere of Europe or Asia or of some other continent to give life and color to the books which they intended to write. The literary man to-day has to stand on the same level in seeking an appointment as a consul as that occupied by the lawyer or the merchant. There are not as many writers of books and essays in the service to-day as there were in the past, and in one way the United States government is the loser thereby.

If some one would go far back through the files of the state department and read the consular reports contained therein, he doubtless would run across some clever bits of writing put on paper by men who knew the art and who gave interest and color and life to some seemingly dry as dust trade subject. It is very likely that the reports that Francis Bret Harte wrote when he was consul at Glasgow, Scotland, would make delightful reading even though they treated on the subject of wool or, it may be, of Scotch whisky or Scotch cattle. There have been other literary men in the service, some of them better known than Bret Harte. It is only necessary to give the names of Washington Irving and Nathaniel Hawthorne to prove the point. Not long ago in the service abroad the government had Alblon W. Tourgee, Arthur Sherburne Hardy, James Jeffrey Roach, and George Horton. Two of these men died comparatively recently, but they lived long enough to see some of their writings appear in print as public documents and to know that the manner in which they treated their scrub oak, and thickets of white and purple gorse, fighting stubbornly for a hold upon the shifting sands, with here and there some straggling groups of pine, the protesting remains of a great forest which wind and sand, and fire, and water had spared."

This was a description

BOXERS ATTACKING AMERICAN LEGATION IN PEKING, CHINA

subjects was appreciated by thousands of their American countrymen.

Some of the other consuls abroad, men who made no pretense to literary ability, have turned in from time to time trade reports that were picturesque in their nature and written with extreme cleverness. Not long ago the government decided to issue in a form between a pamphlet and a magazine the Daily Consular Reports. As the editor of the publication a veteran newspaper man, Maj. John M. Carson, was appointed. With his training he saw to it that the best of the material received from the consuls was given a place of prominence, and he succeeded in making of the consular reports a publication of real interest.

In the records of the department there is one report which from the first paragraph holds the close attention of the reader. It was read the other day by one who did not know until the last line was reached whose hand had been at work in its writing. The thought was, here is something worth while.

The title of the article was simply "Reforestation in France," and the first few lines showed little of interest. Then the eye reached this: "One after another great waves of sand, moved by the restless winds that swept across the Atlantic, continued their unceasing march across the fair plains of southern France, burying all before them—fields, meadows, vineyards, houses, churches, even villages—leaving behind them only gray billows, to which clung bunches of bracken, a few starved bushes of of the irresistible march of the gray sand dunes from the shore of the Bay of Biscay toward the heart of the most productive land in Europe. The description was embodied in a consular report, and it was so utterly different from the descriptions written by most consuls, or by their clerks, as is more often the case, that the reader's eye and mind went on wondering, with curiosity held in check until the signature should come at the very end. The thought was that here was a consul or a clerk who should be writing books instead of commercial pamphlets intended for the eye of the few. The story—this official communication is a story and nothing else—leads to the final planting of the pines under the direction of Napoleon—pines which saved the fields of France.

"Wherever the foot of the sand dune rested, there was hopeless blight. A little wiry grass grew in the shadow of the heather and gorse, on which the sheep browsed under the eyes of solemn-faced shepherds perched on stilts and knitting as they watched. On and on crept the phalanx of the terrible dunes, slowly but surely blighting all in their path, not only creating a desert but destroying hope. As long as the winds blew from the west the dunes marched to the east; the desert fires ravaged the intervening spaces; flocks grew fewer, the desolation more extreme. In the heart of sunny France a desert was established, ever increasing in extent and threatening to stretch across its fairest fields the aridness of the Sahara."

The official document then tells us in the words of its contributor how France was saved by the adoption of the idea of Bremonet, one of the sons of the seemingly doomed region. The seeds of the pine, the "pin maritime" of the French, were gathered and sprouted carefully and the young trees were planted in places "where the moving sands did not overwhelm them until their tough roots had taken a firm hold, their wiry leaves, which loved the briny spume, would offer no resistance to the wind, and, falling about their roots, would give shelter and nutriment until a forest grew which would hold the sands in check and save the threatened interior from desolation."

It was Napoleon who seized upon the idea of Bremonet. "His vision penetrated the centuries and he saw the march of the deadly dunes arrested and the desert they had created made to blossom like the rose."

The consul tells us that after a century has passed the statue of Bremonet looks down one of the great furrows which lie between the dunes he showed how to conquer. Today, as we are told, "the dark squadrons of the pin maritime are posted on thousands of sandy slopes, faithful guardians in the shelter of which the vineyards and wheat fields rest secure. The gray dunes which were sweeping over the land have become serried fortresses which shelter civilization and prosperity."

At least one real live item was contributed not long ago by G. H. Ravndal, United States consul at Beirut, Syria, to the pages of the consular reports. When this was put into the publication it is probable that the editor-in-chief was on a vacation. Otherwise the Beirut consular tale would have been put on the first page instead of being sandwiched in between "Rubber Cultivation" and "Commercial Failure in Germany."

According to the consular report Pasha Abdul Rahman at one time imported into Damascus a booster steam threshing machine through the agency of a gentleman named Michel El-fendi Nasser of Beirut. It is the belief of Consul Ravndal that the Indiana thresher will rout the Pedouins of the desert, and he leads up to this climax with a picturesque recital of the facts attending the arrival of the machine and its subsequent career. His tale of the threshing follows:

"His triumphal march through Damascus stirred the White City of the East from center to circumference. On its way into the country it broke down bridges innumerable, but pulled itself out of the creek beds beautifully, and it had the honor of being started on its pioneer career in the presence of the governor-general of the province, the field marshal in command of the Fifth army corps and many other gentlemen of high station in Ottoman civil and military life. With its self-feeder, automatic bagger, straw blower, etc., it is a marvel of ingenuity, and its service to this country in blazing the way for labor-saving machinery, with its accompanying amelioration of industrial and social conditions in a region east of Mount Hermon, where people live and work as did their forefathers when Abraham crossed their pastures with his Chaldean flocks, is beyond estimation. In the Hauran to-day thousands of acres are lying idle; they are likely now to be reclaimed, and the predatory Bedouin tribes who infest the country will have to retire before the new order of things."

Consular positions do not pay large sums of money, but the life is in many respects an attractive one and there are always many applicants for any vacancies which may exist. It is virtually a necessity that the person who desires a place in the consular service shall be able to speak at least two modern languages; that is, one in addition to English. While the examinations are not supposed to be hard some men who have been through college with credit in their studies have failed to answer properly enough of the questions put to them to give them a hold on the service.

At times the United States consuls have dangers to encounter. It was exceedingly unpleasant in Spain for some of Uncle Sam's representatives during the months just prior to the beginning of actual hostilities at Manila bay. In Chili and in Turkey within a comparatively short time the consuls have had occasion to put up a brave front against the populace and to show the stuff that they were made of. Fresh in the memory of everybody is the awful time which the beleaguered legations had within the walls of "the forbidden city" in China.

"You fellows needn't talk about trouble runnin' a newspaper," remarked Col. Snapper, as he drew a mighty draught from his glass. "In the days o' '49, when I was holdin' down a editorial sheet, a feller sidled inter the room, mighty muffled up about the throat, an' his head skewed to one side like it hed b'n set on the bias."

"He was a long-geared galoot, what carried a slusher smile with him an' a long, muddy frock coat that reached to his heels. There was on'y the brim of a respectable hat on his head; a ragged y'ar o' white kid gloves was tryin' to cover his han's. Oh, he was a Christmas ornament!"

"Is the walleyed byener that runs this rag ter hum?" he axes, with a hiss like a busted bliler.

"I thought shorely that I had ter do with a manywac, or some freak what got loose from a side show. There-upon I reaches for me gun."

"Drap that!" sez he, mighty calm like, 'an' set still,' at the same time flourishin' a big knife above me nose. "Then he sot down, and looks at me with a most mischevous eye. He looks aroun' his him for a spell an' then he heads for me. When he come abreast of me he regards me for awhile an' then he sez:

"I see now," sez he, "at you're the red-nosed pirate I'm lookin' fer," as he drew a cheer and drapped into it. "I was some dubersome about yer identity at fust, owin' to the clean paper collar ye have on, but I see I've come to the right shop all right."

"An' the wry-necked ruffian fires his lamps on me in sich a way I concluded not to move, hopin' all the time that old Boldy Butterfoot, my pardner, would happen in 'fore he got v'ilent."

"My name," sez he, "is Bloaker—Silas Ethingham Bloaker—sez he, stropplin' that cleat-clearer on his boot and regardin' me mevelent like."

"Oh, yes," sez I, "you was the gent that took 50 of last week's papers fer me puttin' yer picture in on the eve of yer marriage."

"I did recall the critter, but he didn't look like a man who had been enjyin' the honeymoon—more like a feller that had had a wrastle with a catymount."

"That ain't no lie," sez he, with a grin that showed his teeth, p'inted as a beaver's."

"Well, wa'n't they all right?" I axes. "I took a sight of palms to get your picture took well." I was wonderin' what kind of keards he was holdin' up his sleeve."

"Yas, ye did," sez he, and flips a copy of the paper out of his pocket, feres it out under my nose, and pints to his portrait, that looked fair enough. "That's me, all right, but what is the inscription underneath?" and he read with a roar: "This is the notorious desperado, cut-throat and train-robbor, Buck Blinders. Look out for him, citizens of Calamity county, and hang him on sight!"

"Blamed ef it wa'n't so! That old mushrat, Butterfoot, had went and mixed things up, and the desperado's picture was inscribed with the notice of Bloaker's approaching marriage."

"Why, ye don't mean to say ye're goin' to git mad over a little thing like that?" sez I, thinkin' a soft answer might come in handy."

"Oh, no," sez he, "oh, no, I rather like it, I do," flourishin' that meat-ax, or whatever it was, close to my nose."

"What happens when I goes gayly to meet my bride, rigged out in a $12 suit with suitable trimmin's?"—what happens? bellerin' like a cow buffalo. "Your paper had got there ahead of me. They was some hundred men folks at the depot when I got off. An' every man had a rope, some had two. When they sets eyes on me they lets off a howl like a pack of wolves. Owin' to your facetiousness a depilation of the fust citizens conducts me to the nearest telegraph pole. Ef the county sheriff hadn't arrived, what knowed me, I'd be hangin' there yit. Look at that neck!"—workin' his head up and down like a tortle—that won't sot right tell the crack o' doom, to say nuthin' of my losin' the lady, wuth $760, Mexican, two mules, an' a bull heifer. She said she wa'n't goin' though life hitched to a freak that could look down the back of his neck and had to keep his back turned when he made love."

"If you will excuse me," I sez, "I think I had better go downstairs and start the press," attemptin' to rise."

"I changed my mind sudden about departin' when I see the bloodthirsty look on his face."

"You air, I see, mighty fond of illustration," yer remarks with cuts," sez he."

"Why, yes—as a progressive editor—"

"And so be I," with a whoop like a Digger Injun, wavin' that shinin' blade 'round his head."

"Well," concluded Maj. Snapper, as he felt an old scar on his furrowed forehead, "he done it!"

Wagner to the Musicians.

His little admonition to the musicians was most characteristic and worthy to be noted by many an orchestra of this day. "Gentlemen," he said, "I beg of you not to take my fortissimo too seriously! Where you see 'ff' make a 'fp' of it, and for piano play pianissimo. Remember how many of you there are down there against the one poor single human throat up here alone on the stage."

It is well to "hold hard" when writing letters. Written words have double weight.

The Sound Sleep of Good Health
The restorative power of sound sleep cannot be over estimated and any ailment that prevents it is a menace to health. J. L. Southern, Eau Claire, Wis., says: "For a long time I have been unable to sleep soundly nights, because of pains across my back and soreness of my kidneys. My appetite was very poor and my general condition was much run down. I have been taking Foley's Kidney Pills but a short time and now sleep as sound as a rock. I eat and enjoy my meals, and my general condition is greatly improved. I can now say recommended Foley's Kidney Pills as I know they have cured me."
